

“The Man of Nature”

by Garrett Shepperd, copyright 2017

Opening narration:

A walk in the woods can heal the soul. At least, that's what some believe. And today a mister Lionel Janson will take a most illuminating walk. A nature conservationist of sorts, he has come amongst the trees in order to find an arrogant sense of self-righteousness. But in fact, what he will actually find, is that the trees are not so forgiving....in the Twilight Zone.

Closing narration:

If only trees could talk, what stories they could tell. Well on this particular day, in this particular neck of the woods, the trees did talk, with many stories to tell. “A man of nature.” Once a description of a man given to himself to feel empowered over his fellow humans. But Lionel Janson has come to find a more literal meaning of the phrase.....in the Twilight Zone.
