Opening narration:

This is Emily Newton, age 17 and on the precipice of becoming high school valedictorian. She spends her lunch hour studying in the library alone, minus a nearby skittish and odd classmate with whom she has nothing in common, save being born in the 21^s Century. Witness now an anomaly. Because Ms. Newton is perusing the most current high school yearbooks and will soon discover that there are two peculiar species, no microscope required. Namely, two years which have yet to occur. Because this is the Twilight Zone.

Closing narration:

Emily Newton who today discovered the adage, no man is an island, which most certainly applies to two Millennial misfits whose unlikely friendship averted disaster. And that the most noble acquisition of knowledge was to be found in a book created primarily on its own premises as a warning. Lesson learned in the Twilight Zone.
